The Scalar Saddler

by Stefan Sattler

It should be obvious by now that we have not fully understood the one key attribute of Life Itself: Freedom! Namely the fact that freedom is not the opposite of law and order, but freedom is in fact a law. Freedom is the law of which all other rules have been derived of. All the laws we have created over millennia were merely invented to make freedom possible and to let the process of life flow smoothly. But as a civilization we have forgotten this fact and thus we've failed to curtail our laws in such a way that it would eventually lead to fewer and fewer rules being needed. For the intention was, and still is, to aim for a culture where everybody is naturally fully conscious so that the concept of freedom is fully realized so that almost no more external laws are needed. So, what I am advocating now is to learn to re-write our laws in such a way that the conduct of the people under these laws will eventually lead to the need for less laws. And one key element towards this is that we revert our judicial doctrine from the principle of dogma law to the law of taboo. The concept of taboos is very much in harmony with the Law of Life whereas dogmas simply are not. Dogmas are lethal poison to a culture, a nation, a people and a civilization!

Positivistic (Dogma-) Law means everything is forbidden except for it is explicitly allowed by law. That's the wrong way around. It's about the geometry of law. Positivistic Law is inverted Negativistic (Taboo-) Law. One says, all is forbidden except it is explicitly allowed, while the other one says, everything is allowed, except it is explicitly forbidden! One works with dogmas and the other one with taboos. One is toxic law, and one is healthy law. One is Law of Death, and one is Law of Life.

It is said that the living man stands before the constitution, which translates to the fact that not the law is sacred, but the integer intent to honor and abide by the law is sacred. That means that the most important aspect of what makes a given system and its laws work is located completely outside of the realm of law. Only integrity and the will to understand each other and to honor agreements is what makes any set of rules into a beneficial and smooth working process.

So, I declare the following truth. At the basis of every culture and society in the history of mankind there has to be a social agreement. A covenant between and among the living people and not with any god. That social contract is broken - or never existed at all - in our current world, and we need to fix that. In order to do this, we've got to grasp the deeper architecture of our civilizational Operating System: Rights and Laws.

Rights are what we assume! That means that rights and laws in actual reality do not exist. They are assumptions, presuppositions, fiction. Lawful definition of fiction: Fiction is that dictate of justice that describes a non-existing fact as an existing one! On that basis our current law in the world is practiced. The sum total of those dictates of justice is forming what is called the Canon of Law. Now we have confirmed the fact that our rights and laws are not coming from The God but from assumptions that have been developed and implemented by man over the course of our history. Yes, including the sometimes open but very often hidden and obscured intermingling of other ancestors and entities.

What does indeed exist and is born in into every man and being are claims; in the sense of life-sustaining necessities. So, let's inquire about the difference between claims and rights. We are misunderstanding claims and rights; we are confounding one for the other. We are constantly confusing cause and effect for each other. From the tiniest and from the most mundane to the greatest and most sacred things in life. That which is given, immanent and born in by Life Itself into every man, woman and child are claims, and not rights. The rights are the consequences that we as cultures have established in the awareness of these claims, without the recognition and enabling of which no culture and civilization would be possible. And just for the record: Your claims are going to be denied if you are denying the claims of others without any serious valid reason.

The truth is, my dear mankind, that you are still ruled by the Doctrine of Discovery! Officially we are saying that the so-called Doctrine of Discovery is null and void today, but fact is that this doctrine and its template of the winner takes it all is still the most basically applied template of conducting business, science, politics, religion and everything else in human society. When I look at our human endeavors all I can see is patents, copyrights, claims of ownership and always attempts, including lies, theft and blackmail, to establish the claim of the fact that one has been the first in achieving and realizing whatever. A new medication, a new territory, a weapon or a new scientific discovery and then claim, copyright and own it. And make sure that everybody else must pay tribute, tax, customs, patent fees, usufruct and such. In a sense, that's the equivalent to the ancient Bending the knee.

Isn't it quite paradox and confusing, that when we look at what is actually happening in everyday life we see that everything is ruled according to the Doctrine of Discovery, but at the same time when I look deeply into the essence and root of all the current laws of mankind, the papers, documents and the judicial doctrines, it is all derived in the very end from the assumption that god is the exclusive owner of everything? Meaning real, actual owning isn't something for man and mankind at all. That's what it says, without explicitly saying it. Now, the funny thing is this. If I talked to you, all 8 billion, on a one-to-one basis, you would all say that it is the others who are the unjust and evil ones and that you are part of the good ones because you are a believer in God. Can you see the sad and paradox irony here? It's always the others. But imagine I talked to all 8 billion and everybody is saying, it's the others. Then let me ask you. Who are the others, if not you yourself?

As I've said before, the mistake is that you start with an assumption, make this assumption into a belief and then a dogma and are now observing everything through that falsifying dogma. It is this vicious cycle that is the root cause of all systemic evil here on earth. I believe in God. God is good and thus, because I believe in God and am thus a part of him, I am per definition the good one which leaves only one option left for the other one: At maximum he could be considered as equally good, but, as is obvious by frank observation in real life, rather sooner than later he will be deemed to be the bad and evil one! Dang! Trapped in a death spiral. We could call that spiritual vanity or the Religious Dunning-Kruger-Effect.

And precisely that was the intent behind inventing a dogmatic, codified, omnipresent and omnipotent God. By implanting that grotesque idea of The God into your deepest inner core, the energetic blueprint of yourself you are per definition denied ownership of the only thing you should ever own: Your own Self! And by the way, this "First Cause" is not and cannot be exclusively within oneself but as well not exclusively outside of oneself, and it is not and cannot be a being/entity, although it is for sure alive and conscious. But all your religions tell you otherwise. For sure, because without that twist they could not build a dogmatic slave system upon that assumption.

See, man is running around like crazy for millennia, trying to claim and to own everything. From the Earth to gold, slaves and women to genomes, water, air, patents, ideas, even frequencies and the souls of the living and the dead, and much more. But we never find satisfaction, because all these things will never fulfill our true and natural longing. Namely, to be in possession of and to own ourselves! But unfortunately, all the really good things in life are only possible if you own yourself. To love, to be conscious and invest yourself in a greater cause, to marvel, to be creative and to realize Life Itself. Spiritual growth, responsibility, free will, devotion and much more are only true, authentic and valuable once you have begun to accept the only real challenge in life: Facing yourself and taking responsibility for and ownership of yourself. And additionally, if you don't own yourself – as per religious doctrine – obviously you can't own anything at all.

So, I say: No! The strongest word and the most profound yes. Remember, it's even asked in your bible, something along the lines: And you just say one word, this one word and you shall be absolutely free and unbound! Well, this word is not any name of whatsoever messenger, entity, demon, God or whatnot. It's not any spell or mantra nor any Abra Kadabra. No! No, this is the word. It's that simple and straight forward. Because no is the strongest yes one can give. The strongest and clearest verbal, linguistic expression of intent. That's the seemingly paradox secret here. Without the possibility of no, no meaningful yes could ever exist. And vice versa, for sure. Without the option of a yes one couldn't know what no is.

So, now I'm saying no, I am not subject to Rome and/or to any branch of the Abrahamic Cult nor to the Anglo-Papal-Zionist One World Order Cult!
